When Determining How You Will Apply...

- Early Decision (ED): ED programs are usually binding. 'Binding' means that the applicant promises from the start that they will attend the school if their application is accepted, regardless of how much financial aid is provided. ED applicants are expected to submit only one ED application to one school. They can submit applications to other schools under normal application procedures, but agree to withdraw all those applications if they are accepted to the ED school.
- Early Action (EA): EA programs give students the benefits of early notification without the binding obligation of ED. EA programs typically have an earlier application deadline than regular/rolling decision schools. Even if accepted, students are free to apply to other schools and compare financial aid offers.
- Regular Decision: Colleges using this program generally have a January, February, or March application deadlines and notify all of the applicants at the same time (no later than April 15th).
- Rolling Decision: Schools that use rolling admissions review applications as they are received and accept applications until they've filled in all spots in their freshman class. Some schools will tell you their decisions in 4-8 weeks while others send out all their decisions at once.
